“Spook” means Spook Limited. “Directors” means the two Spook founding directors: Martin Luck and Andrew des’ Ascoyne.

Each policy will be reviewed annually and sooner where changes in legislation, business activities or identified risks require it.

01 Purpose

Spook is committed to conducting business honestly and preventing bribery and corruption. Spook will comply with the Bribery Act 2010 and other applicable anti-bribery legislation.

No commercial opportunity or relationship justifies offering, requesting or accepting a bribe.

02 Scope

This policy applies to directors, employees, workers and anyone acting on Spook's behalf, including agents, introducers, consultants and contractors. It applies to dealings with private organisations and public officials, in the UK and overseas.

Spook will communicate relevant requirements to business partners and include appropriate obligations in their agreements.

03 Responsibilities

Directors are responsible for assessing bribery risks, providing proportionate controls, training and investigating concerns. Spook must ensure that people working under their supervision understand the policy and obtain the necessary approvals.

Everyone covered by this policy must follow it, keep accurate records and report suspected breaches promptly.

04 Prohibited conduct

A bribe is a financial or other advantage offered, promised, given, requested or accepted to induce or reward improper conduct. It may involve money, gifts, hospitality, employment opportunities, favours or benefits provided through another person.

Spook prohibits:

- Offering, promising, giving, requesting or accepting bribes.
- Kickbacks or undisclosed benefits connected with business decisions.
- Facilitation payments intended to speed up routine official actions.
- Using another person or organisation to make a payment or provide a benefit that Spook could not provide directly.
- Donations, sponsorship or other arrangements used to disguise improper payments.

Where a demand involves an immediate threat to personal safety, the person affected should prioritise their safety and report the circumstances to a director as soon as it is safe to do so. Any payment must be recorded accurately.

05 Gifts and hospitality

Gifts and hospitality must be reasonable, proportionate, transparent and have a genuine business purpose. They must not improperly influence a decision or create the appearance of doing so.

Spook prohibits offering or accepting cash, cash equivalents, concealed benefits, or gifts or hospitality linked to a favourable procurement, renewal or regulatory decision.

Written approval from a manager is required before offering or accepting any gift or hospitality. A director must approve anything involving a public official, a live tender, repeated benefits or other heightened risk. Individual directors must obtain approval from the other director and must not approve their own benefits. Approval cannot make a prohibited benefit acceptable.

Unsolicited gifts must be declared promptly and must not be used until a decision has been made about how to handle them. Offers, approvals, refusals and returns must be recorded in a gifts and hospitality register, including the parties involved, date, purpose, estimated value and approver.

Where appropriate, accepted gifts will normally be shared through the company pool. These requirements apply regardless of value; no monetary threshold makes a benefit automatically acceptable.

06 Suppliers, agents and payments

Before appointing a supplier, agent, introducer or other service provider, Spook will carry out checks proportionate to the risks involved. These will consider ownership, reputation, competence, relevant connections to public officials, the proposed services and fees, and country or sector risks.

Warning signs must be investigated before proceeding. Higher-risk arrangements require enhanced checks and director approval. Agreements must describe the services, fees and payment terms and include appropriate anti-bribery obligations.

Unexplained commissions, requests to pay unrelated parties or personal accounts, false invoices, unusual cash arrangements and pressure to bypass checks must be escalated to a director. No commitment or payment may proceed while concerns remain unresolved.

New or changed payment details must be verified independently through a trusted contact route. Payments must have a legitimate business purpose, comply with agreed terms and be supported by accurate documentation.

07 Donations, conflicts and records

Charitable donations and sponsorship require prior written director approval and must not be used to obtain an improper advantage.

Spook will not make political donations.

Actual or potential conflicts of interest must be disclosed before participating in the relevant decision.

Contracts, due diligence findings, approvals and financial records must clearly explain each transaction. Off-book accounts, concealed payments and misleading expense descriptions are prohibited. Records must be retained in accordance with applicable requirements and Spook's retention arrangements.

08 Reporting, breaches and review

Concerns must be raised promptly with a director. Where that person is involved, the concern should be raised with the other director.

Spook will assess reports fairly, restrict information to those who need it and protect anyone who raises a genuine concern or refuses to participate in bribery from retaliation. A concern does not need to be proven before it is reported. Nothing in this policy prevents a lawful report to an appropriate external authority.

Breaches may result in disciplinary action, up to and including dismissal following a fair process, or termination of a business relationship. Suspected criminal conduct may be reported to the relevant authorities.

Directors will review bribery risks, registers, training and the effectiveness of controls at least annually.
